Slain Envoy Described as Anti-Castro

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 26

(UPI)—Cuban refugee sources said today that Jesus Flores Aguirre, the Mexican diplomat murdered in Havana Thursday, had a "very heated" argument with members of Premier Fidel Castro's secret police a few days before his death.

The source said the dispute occurred when Flores went to Havana airport with three refugees who had sought asylum in the Mexican Embassy to see them safely out of the country.

"Several G-2 (secret police) men tried to open the travelers' suitcases but the diplomat intervened, saying they had been closed with the Embassy seal and he would not allow it to be broken," they said.

"He made his demand for immunity stick."

The refugees said also that Flores had helped "many other Cubans . . . so it was not impossible that some police agents might have built up an enmity against him."

The Mexican, who was Minister Counselor of the Havana Embassy, was found fatally wounded Thursday night in a car parked near the Embassy.
